

Brand New Hair Loss Treatments

Contributed by admin
Sunday, 03 December 2006

For 2006, news on hair loss is very encouraging for those suffering from a receding hairline. With new products coming on the market for help for hair loss, there is less for them to worry about. Propecia and minoxidil are two of the products that have increasing results in new hair growth. They also help to prevent further hair loss and when combined with careful grooming, you can have a full head of hair.

With the new products for 2006, men don't have to bother with using lotions on the scalp several times a day. Propecia now comes in the form of a single capsule that you do take each morning. However, this product is not a cure for baldness and will only work as long as you are taking the medication. New research on hair loss has also revealed that hair loss varies with the seasons of the year. It is a well-known fact that using heat substances such as curling irons, hair straighteners and electric rollers do damage the hair follicles and cause them to fall out. Before you start using hair loss products, you should try to ascertain the reason your hair is falling out. For some people a lack of certain vitamins in the diet is the reason and for women, menopause, taking birth control pills or giving birth can cause a dramatic increase in the amount of hair that they lose each day. In this case, hormones are the cause and there is very little that anyone can do about it. The situation will rectify itself when the body's hormones start to balance out. There are also genetic reasons for hair loss in both men and women. Alopecia is a condition that affects young and old, which is why it is common to see young men with no hair. However, baldness seems to be the fashion for 2006 and many men are actually shaving their heads.{mosgoogle left}